Stages of Commitment (Fr. Mark Link, S.J.)

A television talk-show host once said that commitment is made up of three stages. First, there's the fun stage. That's when we go out and say, "I love doing this. Why didn't I get involved sooner?"

Second, there's the intolerant stage. That's when we go out and say, "Anyone who doesn't get involved isn't really a true believer."

Finally, there's the reality stage. That's when we suddenly realize that our involvement is going to make only a microscopic dent in the problems of the world. And that's the stage at which saints are made.

There are people in this world, some you might even know, who realize that they are going to make only a microscopic dent in the problems of the world. But they also realize that the worse evil is to do nothing because they can do only a little... Their commitments make us ask ourselves, "What have I done in the past to get involved? What am I doing in the present to make a difference? What ought I do in the future even if it makes only a microscopic dent in the problems of the world?"

What is the stage of your faith commitment—fun stage, intolerant stage, or reality stage? (www.appleseeds.org)

Francis inspires confession boom

The number of people asking for the sacrament of reconciliation has jumped since the election of Pope Francis, Italian priests say. (...) "There has been a considerable increase in the number of people who have started asking for confession again," said Fr. Paolo Padrini, parish priest of Stanzanno, a village in the Northern Italian province of Alessandria. He mentioned one elderly catechist in particular, who following his sermon, quoted Bergoglio: "you smell like your flock... My altar boys heard the Pope's sermon at the Casal del Marmo prison for young offenders [Holy Thursday], in video streaming and were struck by his reference to the "caress of God."

"A lot of people I confessed I hadn't seen for a long time – Fr Domenico Sirtori, parish priest of the Church of San Maurizio on Solbiate, a village in the Northern Italian province of Varese. "They told me they came because they felt they could relate to the new Pope. People had felt the Church as something distant from them. It is as if Francis had burnt away that distance, that invisible wall which the media had helped create." (...) (<http://cathnews.com/article.aspx?aeid=35600>)
